Hangover star generates some buzz

No passport? Don't travel

BORDER The "world's longest undefended border" is pretty well defended.

Come Monday, Canadians and Americans alike will need to carry a passport in order to cross the 9,000-kilometre frontier and enter the United States. The Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative affects travellers older than 16.

Separate trials for accused

The controversy surrounding the so-called Deal With The Devil made with Karla Homolka for her testimony against Paul Bernardo could be the reason the man and woman charged with murdering Victoria Stafford will be tried separately, the man's lawyer said Thursday.

Michael Rafferty, 28, was charged with first-degree murder last week and prosecutors have upgraded accessory charges against Terri-Lynne McClintic, 18, to first-degree murder.

Terri-Lynne McClintic

The Crown indicated the two will be tried separately.

While Rafferty's lawyer, Hal Mattson, made it clear outside court he had no direct knowledge of why the Crown decided to conduct separate trials, he said people could speculate there's a deal in the works with McClintic.

"Usually (it's) because they are talking to one or other of the counsel and they've got a different tack," Mattson told reporters outside the court.

McClintic's lawyer, Jeanine LeRoy, said she has not had any discussions with the Crown attorney to that end.

The two accused made brief court appearances Thursday via video link.

McClintic appeared dishevelled and at the end of her appearance said "thank you" in a hoarse voice.

Rafferty, sporting neatly trimmed facial hair, stood nearly motionless during his appearance, his hands clasped in front of him.

Clinton, Bush in town on rare double bill visit

PROTESTS Anti-war activists and demonstrators with a bone to pick with George W. Bush and Bill Clinton are being treated to a rare visit of both former U.S. presidents today when the two men speak to a private audience at the Metro Convention Centre.

Hundreds of protesters expressing their displeasure with, well, pretty much everything the two men accomplished while in office are expected to clog downtown streets this afternoon in a gathering that is expected to illustrate the vast range of issues these two polarizing former leaders evoke. A Coalition of the Against, if you will.

George W. Bush

"We don't think Bush should be able to come to Toronto and be treated in such a way that he's seen as a respected statesperson," said James Clark of the Toronto Coalition to Stop the War, an organization representing more than 70 labour, student, community and faith-based organizations in the GTA.

The coalition plans to erect a three-metre tall image of Bush dressed as a prison inmate, at which protesters will throw shoes. Rubber gloves painted red will be worn to illustrate what demonstrators call "blood on Bush's hands."

The former presidents, both 62, will spend 90 minutes discussing global and domestic challenges facing Canada. Canada's former ambassador to the U.S., Frank McKenna, will moderate the event including a question-and-answer session with the audience. Seats start at $200.

Playing field not 'law-free'

An Ontario judge sent out a warning Thursday that the playing field is not a "criminal law-free zone" as he convicted an 18-year-old rugby player of manslaughter for a violent sucker-tackle that caused a rival's death.

Manny Castillo, 15, died from a head injury just days after he hit his head on the field during a high school rugby game in May 2007.

Justice Bruce Duncan ruled the convicted athlete had no exemption to use deadly force simply because he was participating in a sport known for its testosterone-fuelled aggression.

"The playing field is not a criminal law-free zone. The laws of the land apply in the same way as they do elsewhere," he told the court in handing down his verdict.

The now 18-year-old athlete, who also played top-rank hockey, "committed an assault, an unlawful act," Duncan said. "That unlawful act caused death. The defendant is therefore guilty of manslaughter."

"The playing field is not a criminal law-free zone."
Justice Bruce Duncan

Court heard the assault came in the dying seconds of a rugby match on the Lorne Park Secondary School field in Mississauga.

eHealth controversy brewing

RECORDS The second Ontario agency set up to create electronic health records isn't faring much better than the first, which was shut down after spending nearly $650 million of taxpayers' money, the opposition parties charged Thursday.

eHealth Ontario, which was created last September by the Liberal government to replace the Smart Systems for Health Agency, has already doled out nearly $5 million in contracts without taking competitive bids.

Health Minister David Caplan insisted single-sourcing $5 million in contracts was allowed because of the "urgency" of the project, even though the deadline for electronic health records is 2015.

However, even Premier Dalton McGuinty admitted he was concerned.

Police confirm body is that of missing teen

Mason MacPhail, 16, of Cavan, Ont., had been missing since Tuesday night when he became separated from three friends after they attended a concert in east-end Toronto.

Police say a post-mortem will be conducted to determine the cause of death.

MacPhail's body was located at about 11 a.m. by the police marine unit in a shipping canal.

Lemonade good for heart

Sunny Side

AMBER BELLAIRE
for Metro Toronto

Amanda's Lemonade Stand is no ordinary side-of-the road, spontaneous way of killing an hour or two on a hot day.

Amanda Belzowski

Eleven-and-three-quarters-year-old, Amanda Belzowski has been working hard to ensure that her citrusy beverages will help ring in a multitude of cash for the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario's annual bike-riding fundraiser, the Becel Heart and Stroke Ride for Heart.

Belzowski's younger brother, Joshua, 3, will join in on her annual fundraiser as the face of Joshua's Cookie Counter — a side table featuring sugary treats. Pizza and other foods will also be available.

Belzowski and parents Lisa and Dan arranged entertainment, a silent auction and local celebrity appearances.

Belzowski successfully solicited donations from businesses such as Metro, Dippin' Dots, Richtree Market and the Toronto Maple Leafs and Argonauts. Donald Trump, Larry King, gymnast Lance Ringnald and the National Ballet of Canada have also chipped in.

One of the most exciting packages available in the silent auction was donated by magician David Copperfield. Tickets and airfare to his Las Vegas show, a suite at the MGM Grand Hotel and a tour of the magician's warehouse by Copperfield himself are just some of the perks in the package he supplied.

Those who can't make it Sunday can buy a "virtual glass" of lemonade any time between now and June 7 — the day of the bike ride — at lemonade4heart.org. Prices for both virtual and tangible refreshments are a "pay-what-you-can" donation.

To date, Amanda's Lemonade Stand has raised more than $100,000.

Amanda's Lemonade Stand

- WHAT: Refreshments, entertainment, silent auctions to raise money for the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario
- WHERE: 10 Brian Cliff Dr. (off Lawrence Avenue East, west of Leslie Street, across from Edwards Gardens
- WHEN: Sunday, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., or donate online until June 7

Religious school funding in court

EDUCATION The turbulent waters of funding for religious schools were navigated by Ontario government lawyers Thursday as they vehemently defended the decision to deny certain disability benefits to children attending private schools.

"The government doesn't have to fund what everybody needs." Robert Charney

"Nobody gets publicly funded private schools," government lawyer Robert Charney told a three-judge panel in Ontario Superior Court. "The government doesn't have to fund what everybody needs."

The battle started two years ago after eight families launched a lawsuit against the Ontario government because it refused to fund services at private religious schools for blind, deaf and learning-disabled children.

The lawyers for the families say the distinctions made between the disabilities which receive support and those that don't is arbitrary and discriminatory.

Pensions may be defining election issue

Pension reform will be the defining issue of the next federal election and the next decade as Canadians demand changes to rules that hinder saving for retirement, says the CEO of one of Canada's largest pension fund managers.

Jim Leech, chief executive of the Ontario Teachers' Pension Plan, said Thursday the confluence of an aging population and the financial crisis have turned the fate of pension plans and the retirees who depend on them into front-page news.

"As Tommy Douglas and national medicare defined public debate in the '60s, pension reform could be the defining issue of the first decade of this century," Leech said in a speech to the Empire Club of Canada.

Leech said he is troubled by the private sector's move from defined-benefit plans, which guarantee employees steady income after retirement, to defined-contribution plans, which base benefits on investment returns.

Under current federal pension rules, defined-benefit plans must have enough money to pay retirement benefits to all members of the plan into the future. Many companies that offer these plans are under pressure to make up overwhelming shortfalls through higher contributions after the financial crisis caused plans' assets to plunge.

Sheppard line to cost a cool billion

TRANSIT Just two weeks after Prime Minister Stephen Harper and Premier Dalton McGuinty announced $950 million to build the Sheppard East light rail line, the cost has gone up.

The TTC Thursday approved a change that would see the line connect underground with the Sheppard subway and run east in a tunnel under Highway 404, reaching the surface near Consumers Road.

The change will add $110 million to the cost of the 15-kilometre project running from Don Mills station to Meadowvale Road in Scarborough. Construction is to start later this year and be completed in 2013.

Benign Essential Blepharospasm (BEB) is a disorder that causes the eyelids to spasm and close uncontrollably. Those afflicted have trouble seeing, reading, walking, driving – in essence, difficulty leading normal lives.

T.O. student to compete in Brain Bee

Sunny Side

Sean Amodeo's brain is full.

It is crammed with anything one would possibly want to know about the intricacies of the mind. How many neurons does the brain contain? "100 billion," the Grade 12 student answers without pause. Prozac relieves symptoms of depression by affecting which neurotransmitter? "Serotonin," he responds in the time it takes to blink.

His impressive knowledge will be put to the test this weekend, when he goes head to head with high school students across the country at the Canadian National Brain Bee at McMaster University, sponsored by the Canadian Institutes of Health Research.

Toronto's hope of having the country's "best brain" literally rests on Amodeo's shoulders. In March, he defeated 26 other hopefuls at the local brain bee at the University of Toronto to reach the national finals. "I do pretty good under pressure," he admits.

His strategy for success is simple: Understand instead of memorize.

"There's so much stuff to know, so I had to break it up," said Amodeo, 18, who attends York Memorial Collegiate Institute. "It's not just a matter of memorization, because you have to understand it to remember it." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE DEVELOPMENT It's just a few words, but it should prevent another battle over building heights at Yonge and Eglinton, where residents fought two Minto condo towers and lost.

Coun. Michael Walker offered a small amendment this week to the transfer of the old TTC bus barns on that corner to Build Toronto, limiting anything built there to 120 metres. That means any developer who purchases the long-unused site wouldn't be able to build higher than 40 storeys — no appeal allowed to the Ontario Municipal Board. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Toothache
Ontario dental assistants have a nagging toothache.

For five years, we've been working for the regulation of dental assistants. Regulation would mandate formal training for all dental assistants. But the Ontario government has postponed our review citing necessary cutbacks in a poor economy.

Postponing regulation is like putting off good oral care. Dental assistants take x-rays and are responsible for infection control. Yet many are still trained on the job in Ontario putting public health and safety at risk.

We will continue our fight to ensure that Ontario dental assistants become regulated one day. Meanwhile, to protect your family and preserve your oral health, ask if ODAA-certified dental assistants are working in your dentist's office.

Tories eye sale of AECL reactor

Opposition criticizes privatization

The Harper government plans to put Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.'s nuclear reactor business up for sale.

It's part of a major restructuring that will also mean private-sector management for AECL's Chalk River research facility, which makes the medical isotopes used in diagnostic scans.

Resources Minister Lisa Raitt

Natural Resources Minister Lisa Raitt said Thursday that AECL is being put on the block in response to a National Bank report commissioned to examine whether all or part of the Crown company should be privatized.

A National Bank report found "significant private sector interest" in AECL's reactor business, few companies wanted to buy the aging Chalk River facility, though there were firms interested in running it.

Opposition MPs criticized the move to split up and sell off AECL as a "fire-side sales in a recession."

Ipperwash a step closer to transfer

PARK An aboriginal group is now one step closer to reclaiming Ipperwash Provincial Park — the site of a fatal confrontation between police and aboriginal protesters 14 years ago.

The Ontario government signed an agreement Thursday setting out the next steps to transfer the Lake Huron retreat to the Chippewas of Kettle and Stony Point First Nation.

The park doesn't immediately become part of the reserve, but the agreement has outlined what needs to be done to make that happen.

Reports say the park could be reopened to the public as early as next spring.

The handover was a key recommendation of the inquiry into the 1995 death of Dudley George.

George was among a group of aboriginal protesters who occupied the park and was shot during a confrontation with Ontario Provincial Police.

The province would also pay for a memorial for George. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fatherly deficit advice

Government should adopt 'just say no' policy

Kevin Gaudet
News Analysis

"The federal government is borrowing money at a rate of $1,585 every second, $95,129 every minute, $5.7 million per hour, or just less than $137 million every day."

The next time a politician casually mentions borrowing a billion dollars — or $50 billion for that matter — ask yourself this question: What would my family do?

The Harper government has just announced that its deficit for this year alone will exceed $50 billion. As if this isn't bad enough, none of the opposition leaders seem to be concerned this deficit figure is too much. When it comes to requests to spend, all of these politicians should heed the same advice they give their children: "Just say no."

The federal budget was tabled in January with a $34-billion deficit. Yet Finance Minister Jim Flaherty has already announced the deficit will be more than $50 billion. This is a 47 per cent increase in the projected deficit in only two months. This change is a doozy — and one that will not only impact the taxpayers of today, but also those of tomorrow. It is they who will have to pay-off this huge and growing debt burden.

So, how much is $50 billion? Well, it could buy roughly 211 NHL teams, or build 100 state-of-the-art sports stadiums, or buy 26 space shuttles. If divided up and given to each Canadian, it would be $1,492 each.

While it is difficult to wrap your brain around such a large number, one can see how fast Canada's debt is climbing at www.Debtclock.ca, a website launched by the Canadian Taxpayers Federation. The federal government is borrowing money at a rate of $1,585 every second, $95,129 every minute, $5.7 million per hour, or just less than $137 million every day of every week of every month for the whole of this year.

The government says it can afford this amount of debt. It argues Canada is better positioned than any other Western country to borrow this much money. Technically, this may be true, but it misses the point. Just because the bank may give your family a higher mortgage doesn't mean you should take it. Driving up the federal debt amounts to fiscal child abuse, because every child will be born already owing roughly $14,000 in debt.

The only way to reverse the debt spiral is for politicians to do what every family does when it hits rough times — limit spending. They must learn to say no to things like: Calls for more hikes to employment insurance; requests for corporate welfare like auto bailouts; and lucrative bonuses for government officials, just to name a few.

Saying no may be tough, but it is important.

Kevin Gaudet is the federal director and Ontario director of the Canadian Taxpayers Federation.

Feds budget $7B for auto bailout

ECONOMY The federal government is calculating the full value of the expected cost of the bailout of the battered auto sector — up to $7 billion for Ottawa alone — in its new budget deficit projection, an official says.

A rough estimate suggests the government is booking about $7 billion in new spending as part of its revised $50-billion deficit calculation. That amounts to just less than half of the $16-billion increase in the deficit announced Tuesday, a development that has sparked a political furore in the Commons.

62 According to the New York Times, GM has confirmed that it will receive up to $62 billion in bailout money. The U.S. government will ante up $50 billion US for the Detroit-based automaker, making Canada's contribution between $8.25 billion and $11.1 billion, depending on the calculation of production share in Canada.

The federal government had included $2.7 billion in loans to GM Canada and Chrysler Canada as part of the 2009-10 budget brought down in late January. However, with negotiations on a General Motors Corp. bailout continuing, and the Chrysler restructuring inching along in a New York bankruptcy court, the cost to Ottawa and Ontario of rescuing the two companies' Canadian divisions has not been finalized. But the broad outline of how much the two governments will be on the hook for the North American auto restructuring is coming into focus, and it's much larger than anything previously reported. Tories punt climate change enforcement

Emission limits won't take effect for up to 6 years

Canadian rules limiting industrial greenhouse gas emissions won't even be developed until next year and will not take legal effect for up to six years to match a proposed U.S. timetable, Environment Minister Jim Prentice said Thursday.

It's a far cry from the Conservative government's former "Made in Canada" climate change plan that was supposed to come into force more than six months from now.

And it further calls into question Prime Minister Stephen Harper's stated target for reducing Canada's greenhouse gas emissions by 20 per cent from 2006 levels by 2020.

Prentice, speaking to reporters by conference call from London, said emissions cuts for what he termed the "pure industrial sector" — the largest emitting sector representing about 30 per cent of total Canadian emissions — will likely have to be harmonized with U.S. rules in order to protect Canadian jobs and investments.

Jim Prentice

And he noted the current American timetable won't see anything taking effect until between 2012 and 2016.

It's just the latest moving target on successive Conservative climate change policies that critics say are mostly hot air.

The detailed regulations were supposed to be published last year and come into force Jan. 1, 2010.

The plan superceded an earlier Tory policy, announced in 2006, that was also supposed to start reducing emissions by 2010.

Prentice said that before the next round of international climate change talks in Denmark this December, the government will make public "a full suite of policies that relate to all sources of greenhouse gas emissions."

Challenging B.C.'s prostitution laws

COURT A former longtime prostitute says she should be able to challenge Canada's prostitution laws on her own and the court's requirement that her case be bolstered by women currently in the sex trade isn't fair.

Sheri Kiselbach worked in the sex trade for three decades and says she was frequently forced to compromise her safety because of Canada's laws.

But a judge has said those laws don't affect her now that she's no longer a prostitute and isn't facing charges. The B.C. Supreme Court judge concluded only a prostitute currently facing charges can launch the constitutional argument.

Kiselbach disagrees and her lawyers were at the B.C. Court of Appeal Thursday gathering allies to make that case.

On Thursday, three groups that support the appeal were granted intervener status in the appeal, which will be heard in November.

If successful, the original challenge could head back to B.C. Supreme Court.

The Man Who Made the Whole Town Lose Weight

In the small town of Alesund in Norway, many of its residents began eating a common plant that made over 1,500 of them lose weight! It all began in 2006 when a customer of Johnny Pettersen, a local health food store owner, asked him for advice on how to eliminate sugar cravings.

"I gave my customer mulberry leaf tablets because mulberry is known to lower your blood sugar after meals. When blood sugar is stable, sugar cravings disappear. And it worked very well. I started recommending mulberry to many customers and soon noticed that they were losing weight. This made me curious, so I studied the effect of mulberries on blood sugar, insulin and fat burning. Surely enough, because of the effect on blood sugar, mulberry leaves also lead to lower insulin secretion, which makes you able to burn stored fat better and also reduces fat storage from excess calories."

The 10-day diet

When Pettersen increased the dosage, recommending two mulberry tablets before each meal, he found that his customers not only controlled their sugar cravings, but also lost significant amounts of weight.

"I recommended that customers follow the programme for a minimum of 10 days in order to eliminate their need for sugar stimulation. Sugar works as a drug on the brain and people need to eliminate the need for a 'sugar high' if they want to stay slim. Taking mulberry leaves, my customers changed to a healthier diet without even noticing it — they simply didn't crave sugar."

1500 people lost weight

After the success of the first customers, word travelled fast. In the last 12 months Pettersen has worked with over 1,500 customers in Alesund and the surrounding area. He feels that his simple and natural mulberry formula has been a tremendous success.

He concludes, "Once my customers try mulberry leaves, they come back, often with friends and family, and buy several packages. It is rewarding because I see them coming back happy, healthy and slimmer."

MULBERRY - A BREAKTHROUGH!

For centuries, the Japanese culture, which is known for having a long life and a slim, healthy physique, has enjoyed the benefits of mulberry leaves. We now know from clinical studies how mulberry leaves regulate blood sugar levels. For dieters, this means a lower production of insulin after eating carbohydrates. Insulin is responsible for storing excess calories as fat and for shutting down fat burning. Too much insulin is a dieter's worst enemy!

SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Governor General Michaëlle Jean is greeted at the airport by children at Pond Inlet, Nunavut Thursday. The population of Pond Inlet is 60 per cent youth.

Gov. Gen. criticizes Canada over Arctic education

VISIT Michaëlle Jean has delivered a sharp criticism of Canada's record in delivering education in the Arctic, saying it lags 40 years behind other countries when it comes to higher learning in the North.

The Governor General said she's undeterred by the lukewarm response from Ottawa to her call for a university in the Arctic, which the government has labelled a non-priority.

Jean said she would continue pressing politicians for an institution that would better serve the Inuit and attract non-aboriginal students and teachers to the North.

Jean has stepped up her campaign for such an institution after the government responded less than enthusiastically when she first floated the idea last week.

While her meal of seal heart at Rankin Inlet, Nunavut, Monday has monopolized attention down south, Jean has actually spent much of her eight-day Arctic visit advocating a university for the region.

"Canada is at least 40 years behind," Jean said.

"Canada is the only northern state that doesn't have a university in the North. Canada is four decades behind Norway, Finland, Sweden, the United States."

How Canadians can turn a turbulent stock market into massive profits

"I've made money in every kind of market — up, down, and sideways. Let me show you why today's volatile market is ideal for investors."

George Fontanills, founder of Optionetics, is a Harvard-educated, internationally renowned best-selling author, money manager, and options trading expert.

Canada's economy is being hit hard along with the rest of the world. Job cuts are on the rise. Home values are falling like never before. The recession hits some industries hard, while others escape. From Vancouver to Toronto to Wall Street, it's little wonder the markets are volatile… up 100 to 200 points one day, and down 100 to 200 points the next. Most investors think they can't make money in markets like this. But I can show you how.

THE SECRET IS OPTIONS
Let's face it. For most people, buying a stock is a one-way street. They buy and hold the stock, hoping it will go up. But the smart investors know there's a much better way to profit in the market. In fact, they love the massive volatility of today's market because that's where the massive profits are made.

MARKET VOLATILITY WORKS TO YOUR ADVANTAGE
As the Canadian and global markets react to an economic meltdown and ensuing political battles, today's extreme volatility in the financial markets could become the new norm. Many investors have pulled out. But you can't make money sitting on the sidelines. It is time to change your investment strategy to one that can succeed in unstable markets.

OPTIONS EXCEL IN TURBULENT MARKETS
Certain wealthy investors have always known how to multiply their returns and minimize their risk. You see, for every $1,000 you put in stocks, they only put in $150 – $200 to achieve the same investment muscle. How? Because they use options to leverage or control a stock rather than buy it, extending the power of their investment dollar. That's how the wealthy play the stock market, without the risk of actually buying the stock.

Faults shown in Quebec cancer screening

Quebec health officials are demanding the provincial government react quickly after a study revealed faults in its breast cancer testing, a situation they are comparing to Newfoundland's botched cancer exams.

The study's results indicate there are serious problems with Quebec's cancer screening practices and assessments, the president of the association that represents the province's medical specialists said Thursday.

"The situation is ... very critical." Dr. Gaetan Barrette

Dr. Gaetan Barrette said the pathology errors reveal gaps in the system that could endanger the lives of Quebecers suffering from all types of cancer.

"The situation is, in a certain way, very critical," Barrette told a news conference. "This is a real problem that we must address." THE CANADIAN PRESS

High alert in Korea

The U.S. and South Korea put their military forces on high alert Thursday after North Korea renounced the truce keeping the peace between the two Koreas since 1953.

The show of force along the heavily fortified border dividing the two countries comes three days after North Korea conducted an underground nuclear test and fired a series of short-range missiles.

The test drew immediate condemnation from world leaders and the UN Security Council. U.S. President Barack Obama called it a "blatant violation" of international law.

In response, South Korea said it would join more than 90 countries that have agreed to stop and inspect vessels suspected of transporting weapons of mass destruction.

North Korea called South Korea's participation in the U.S.-led Proliferation Security Initiative a prelude to a naval blockade and a violation of the truce signed to end the three-year war that broke out in Korea in 1950. On Wednesday, the North renounced the 1953 armistice and the following day warned U.S. forces against advancing into its territory.

South Korean elementary school students don gas masks Thursday during a nuclear attack drill in Seoul.

Military tactics

- South Korea moved a 3,500-tonne destroyer into waters near the Koreas' disputed western maritime border Thursday. The North, meanwhile, positioned artillery along the west coast on its side of the border, reports said.

"The northward invasion scheme by the U.S. and the South Korean puppet regime has exceeded the alarming level," the North's Rodong Sinmun newspaper said in a commentary.

"A minor accidental skirmish can lead to a nuclear war."

The U.S., which has 28,500 troops in South Korea and 50,000 in Japan, has denied it is planning action. But troops were placed on their highest alert level in more than two years.

Gas in Russian territory: Analysis

ENERGY Nearly one-third of the natural gas yet to be discovered in the world is north of the Arctic Circle and most of it is in Russian territory, according to a new analysis led by researchers at the U.S. Geological Survey. Russia has been active in asserting its claim to parts of the Arctic. It first submitted a claim to the United Nations in 2001, but was rejected for lack of evidence. Canada, the United States, Denmark and Norway have also sought to assert jurisdiction over parts of the Arctic.

Vaccine for flu virus by October, says health official

A health official from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says a vaccine for influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, could be available as early as October, but only if vaccine production and testing run smoothly this summer. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

News in brief

PAKISTAN Attackers hit a busy market and a police checkpoint in northern Pakistan Thursday, killing 11 people, wounding scores of others and triggering a gun battle between security forces and suspected militants. Bombs mounted on motorcycles tore off walls and shattered windows of a row of small shops in Peshawar's Qissa Khawani bazaar. The blasts came a day after a suicide attack in Lahore.

34 killed in raid on training camp

AFGHANISTAN U.S.-led coalition troops attacked a suspected training camp for foreign fighters in eastern Afghanistan Thursday, and an Afghan official said 34 militants were killed, including 22 Arabs and Pakistanis.

Among the dead were six who blew up their suicide vests during the battle, the U.S. coalition said.

The raid on the heavily guarded compound in Paktika province — which lies on Afghanistan's porous border with Pakistan — serves as a reminder the region remains a breeding ground for Islamist fighters waging insurgencies in both countries.

Coalition troops were hunting for a rebel commander named Sangeen who, the U.S. military alleges, plans and co-ordinates the movement of al-Qaida senior leaders and that of hundreds of foreign fighters.

Warrant Officer Frank Berube examines a memorial stone Thursday at the Dahla dam, 35 kilometres northeast of Kandahar.

Canada vows to repair dam

The bread basket of Afghanistan remains frayed — and signs of Canada's almost year-old promise to help restore some of its former glory remain conspicuously scant.

The lush Arghandab River valley — once home to a bounty of fruits and vegetables — is struggling to live up to its former reputation. Nowadays, opium is the crop of choice.

Canada's $50-million plan to refurbish the Dahla dam and irrigation system on the Arghandab River is the centrepiece of Ottawa's pledge to help restore the valley to its former glory while undermining the drug trade and unemployment that feeds the Taliban at the same time.

So far, however, the only obvious sign of Canadian involvement is a new observation post, manned by a handful of Afghan National Police officers.

The project involves a modest refurbishment of the system. The completion target is 2011.

The contract for the actual work was awarded last year to Montreal-based SNC-Lavalin, Canada's largest engineering firm, and Hydrosult, a Canadian-based water-consulting company.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

The dam

- Built by Americans in the late 1940s and early 1950s, the Dahla dam is an essential part of a 40-kilometre network of irrigation canals, including a diversion channel into Kandahar city.
- Years of civil war and neglect have left the system barely functional.

Cuckoo on endangered list

BRITAIN The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds says Britain's cuckoo is in danger of extinction together with 51 species.

The report found that 21 per cent of Britain's bird species face extinction unless steps are taken to protect them.

It says the migratory birds have suffered population loss largely due to a decrease in food and water supply in sub-Saharan Africa.

New York set to welcome Prince Harry

Prince Harry is headed to New York for his first official visit to the U.S. At midday Friday, the 24-year-old British prince plans to visit the World Trade Center site. He will also name a lower Manhattan garden to honour the 67 British victims of the 9/11 attack. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

News in brief

UNEMPLOYED The UN labour agency says the ranks of the unemployed could swell by 50.4 million worldwide this year because of the economic downturn. The forecast is far more than the 40 million the International Labour Organization predicted in January. The agency urged governments to make job creation part of their stimulus packages. It says 29 million jobs could be saved if companies are given an incentive to retain their workers.

Canadians o-u-t of spelling bee

Hyalithe stumps Toronto's Laura Newcombe, 10, in 2nd semifinal round

The chairs on the ballroom stage emptied one by one, left vacant by those who had guessed and walked away disappointed. Rarely has a spelling bee round been this brutal.

SunnySide

Twenty of 36 spellers, including the three remaining Canadians, were wiped out Thursday in the second semifinal round of the Scripps National Spelling Bee. Five more spellers were eliminated in the next round, leaving 11 to compete in the finals later Thursday night, when the winner would receive more than $40,000 in cash and prizes.

Gone was 11-year-old Veronica Penny of Hamilton, who has become known for burying her head in her hands in a look of despair before spelling her words. She held the pose for about 40 seconds before spelling "maquelle" instead of "macle" (a type of crystal).

Another Canadian speller, 10-year-old Laura Newcombe of Toronto, went out spelling "hyolith" instead of "hyalithe" (an opaque glass that resembles porcelain.)

The day began with 41 semifinalists, survivors of the preliminary rounds that included a record 293 participants.

The third of the Canadian spellers — 13-year-old Claudine Broussard of Port Hawkesbury, N.S. — was just about to approach the microphone when officials called for a two-minute commercial break. She, and the entire room, let out a huge nervous exhalation. Broussard's word turned out to be "eurystomatous" (a wide mouth.) She spelled it "eurostomatus."

French shrug off uproar caused by royal 'snub'

D-DAY While Britons fumed over a perceived French snub of the Queen, the French responded Thursday to the cross-Channel spat with a Gallic shrug.

ShareYourViews
torontoletters@metronews.ca

France failed to invite the Queen to Normandy for next month's 65th anniversary of the Allied landings on D-Day. The diplomatic faux-pas prompted uproar in Britain.

French officials backpedalled Wednesday and said she was welcome to come — but to no avail. The Queen said Thursday she would not attend.

"I don't get it, personally," said Guy Briand, browsing the morning papers just off the Champs-Elysees. "If she comes or not, it's her problem."

He and others did not think France had intentionally snubbed Her Majesty.

Many British visitors to Paris felt less friendly.

"It is an offence, really," said Eleni Laws, who had just stepped off the train from London. "If they did the same thing to the French prime minister, the French would be up in arms and waving their flags, as they do."

Obama tip-toes around W. Bank

TALKS Gingerly trying to advance Mideast peace, U.S. President Barack Obama declared Thursday the U.S. is a "stalwart ally" of Israel but challenged the Israelis to stop settlement construction in the disputed West Bank to help advance the road to peace with the Palestinians.

Barack Obama

His message came on the same day that Israel refused a demand to freeze all construction in the West Bank. "I think it's important not to assume the worst, but to assume the best," Obama said, sitting alongside Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas.

Case against government bailouts

InBusiness
Charles Davies

Unsurprisingly, Canadian Auto Workers members earlier this week endorsed the cost-cutting labour agreement paving the way for $6 billion in federal and provincial aid for General Motors of Canada Ltd. Had CAW president Ken Lewenza's troops failed to ratify this one, their jobs would surely have gone the way of tail fins.

Yet, as GM and its U.S. parent sputter toward bankruptcy, you have to wonder about the rationale for fuelling the company's ride to oblivion with taxpayer dollars.

Sure, it's politically inevitable that Canadian governments would be pressed into involvement. Washington backs a bailout, so non-intervention might result in the relocation of GM Canada's eventual remains to the U.S., leaving 7,500 or so CAW members out of work and possibly taking out many thousands of other related jobs, mostly in voter-rich Ontario.

But at the risk of being bumped from Lewenza's Christmas card list, there are five good reasons why Ottawa and Ontario should keep their support to a bare minimum.

First, General Motors has proved that it's a loser with severe problems in creating marketable products. Letting it fail, and then restructure in bankruptcy protection, would permit the viable portions of the company to survive and prosper while shedding assets that have no real future.

Second, bailouts get governments drawn into legacy issues — like long-term financing and underfunded pensions — that could become a financial morass. About $2 billion of the money you and I lend the company will go to help reduce a pension deficit currently running at about $7 billion. Under the lending agreement, the company will have another six years to eliminate the remaining deficit. But what if it doesn't? Who will pick up the slack then?

Bailout Series

(Editor's note: This is the first part of a three-part series by Charles Davies on financial bailouts.)

Third, favouring autoworkers who have comparatively exceptional wage, benefit and pension packages is unfair to the millions of Canadians who work for much lower wages and benefits and have no protection from job losses.

Fourth, propping up failures while ignoring companies that slug it out (Ford) or succeed (Honda, Toyota) is fundamentally unfair. It's also unfair that other huge industries with problems (forest products for example) don't get the benefit of such government largesse.

Fifth, money used in bailouts could be used more productively elsewhere, providing the infrastructure, regulatory and tax incentives to support companies and industries that actually have a future. Better that then spending billions on GM with absolutely no guarantee that it will make the company one iota better at selling cars.

Tuesday: Governments' dangerous flirtation with interventionism.

New balance between cars and bikes

UrbanCompass
John Sewell
metronews.ca/sewell

One commonly used tactic in political discourse is to become more shrill if you think your argument is weak.

We've seen a good case of this during the last two weeks as some councillors say council is waging a "war on cars."

Excuse me? I thought we were simply watching the subtle readjusting of interests that city council is always in the process of doing. But no, some call it a war on cars because it's a bunch of small changes that wouldn't be noticed unless extreme language was used.

First came the idea of putting a few more bike lanes on streets. As bike riding in Toronto has increased, bikers have asked for more space and sometimes have negotiated it. There's no war going on here, just a new balance on how people get around.

Then they talked of banning right turns on red lights at some intersections heavily used by pedestrians. This idea has been in place for four or five years at Dundas and Spadina and the world hasn't collapsed. No war here.

Third was the radical idea that wider sidewalks (with trees) and bike lanes made sense on Jarvis Street even if one had to get rid of one of the five lanes for cars.

This proposal caused a massive escalation in rhetoric. One expected the war to break out for real on the street or in city hall. It didn't.

City council approved the idea and the war notion subsided, although some councillors have suggested it will be revived once the municipal election is underway in 16 months' time.

In brief

CIBC Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce has reported a $51-million net loss in the latest quarter, improving on a year-ago loss of $1.1 billion, as writedowns continued. Revenue was $2.16 billion, compared with a $126-million top line in the year-earlier period, and up from just more than $2 billion in the first quarter.

SCOTIABANK The Bank of Nova Scotia has reported quarterly net income of $872 million, down 11 per cent from a year-ago profit of $980 million although revenue grew 12 per cent to a record high.

TD BANK Toronto-Dominion Bank has reported a quarterly profit of $618 million, pulled back from $852 million a year ago by non-recurring items and shakiness in wealth management, but earnings in TD's core Canadian retail and commercial banking business were actually up one per cent.

GM sweetens offer

Automaker likely to file Monday for Chapter 11

General Motors Corp. said Thursday a committee of bondholders has agreed to a sweetened deal proposed by the U.S. government to erase the automaker's unsecured debt in exchange for stock.

The news came in a regulatory filing that spells out the Obama administration's game plan for what it hopes will be a speedy Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization that will leave the U.S. government with 72.5 per cent of the new company's shares. A person familiar with GM's plans said it was "probable" it would file for bankruptcy protection Monday.

In the filing, GM says the Canadian and Ontario governments will get shares in the new company in exchange for debt financing.

The revised offer to the holders of $27 billion US in unsecured GM bonds amounted to a take-it-or-leave-it ultimatum: Go along with what the government auto task force's proposal or be left holding the assets a new GM doesn't want — ones with presumably little value at all.

Hossa hopes gambit pays off

Star left Pittsburgh and took a discount to try to win the Cup

STANLEY CUP PREVIEW

Pittsburgh vs. Detroit

Marian Hossa's combination of size, speed and skill helped the banged-up Detroit Red Wings finish off Chicago to set up a Stanley Cup final rematch with the team he spurned.

If Hossa can help Detroit hoist the Cup, his eyebrow-raising decision last summer will be validated.

The marquee free agent signed with Detroit at a relative discount for about $7.5 million US, declining an offer estimated to be worth $49 million to remain with the runner-up Pittsburgh Penguins and reportedly many more millions to play in Edmonton.

"It should be interesting," Pittsburgh goaltender Marc-Andre Fleury said. "We all know the reason why he left us to go there.

"It will be cool to face him, but we can't overthink it."

If Pittsburgh beats Hossa and the defending champions, he will have lost a championship, a lot of money and long-term stability.

"I have to make this not too big a distraction," he said Wednesday night following Detroit's 2-1 overtime victory.

Hossa is hailed for his dazzling talents in Detroit, and is vilified in Pittsburgh for leaving.

The cheers Hossa hears in Game 1 Saturday and Game 2 Sunday likely won't be as loud as the jeers that will cascade on him when the series shifts venues.

When Hossa played Feb. 8 at Pittsburgh, he was booed early and often.

A former teammate isn't sure that provides a home-ice advantage for the Penguins.

"I know myself as a player, when players get booed in other buildings, it just motivates you and makes you want to want to do better," Brooks Orpik said. "If our fans want to boo him, I don't know how much good it's going to do us."

Win or lose, the Red Wings would like to keep Hossa around.

Red Wings general manager Ken Holland, Hossa and Hossa's agent did some negotiating during the season, but both sides chose to put talks on hold until after the season.

"I like it here a lot, but we both decided to stop talking to focus on the playoffs," Hossa said earlier this post-season. "We'll see what happens."

Soccer suits us

FieldofPlay

I'm in England, the land of soccer … sorry, football if you're a purist.

Along with more than 10 million Brits, I've just watched on TV as Manchester United fell to Barcelona in the Champions League final.

Saturday, Chelsea and Everton will play the FA Cup final before 90,000 singing fans at Wembley Stadium. It is a rite of spring in a place where the game means something. You can feel the electricity surrounding the match.

If only it were true in Canada.

"Here we need to change the culture," Jason de Vos told me. De Vos was, for a number of years, the captain of the Canadian men's soccer team, a side that never qualified for the greatest of tourneys, the World Cup, during his 18 years as an elite player.

"The biggest disappointment in my career is to have never gone to the World Cup with Canada," he admitted. "When you're a soccer player, your dream is to play in the World Cup."

In fact, Canada has only once been admitted to the largest single sport spectacle on the face of the Earth.

That was in 1986 in Mexico, and even then the Canadians didn't win a game, much less score a goal. All this mediocrity in a place where soccer is the greatest sport in terms of mass participation.

How do we right the wrong?

Well, Saturday we begin the process. On a special edition of Sports Weekend, de Vos and I will watch some old film — the classic FIFA World Cups of the past, and we'll talk to people about how we harness all this love for a beautiful, simple and affordable game and turn it into the national obsession it ought to be.

Scott Russell is the Host of CBC Sports Weekend seen Saturday afternoons. He has covered professional and amateur sports including nine Olympic games and numerous world championships.

GREGORY SMITH/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Casey Janssen made his return to the Jays against the Atlanta Braves last Saturday. It was his first appearance in the major leagues since late 2007.

Casey on the mound

DAVID SINGH
for Metro Toronto

When Casey Janssen takes the Rogers Centre mound against Boston Friday, he expects to feel a wave of emotions running through his body.

It would be hard not to, given that the Blue Jays' right-hander will be making his first big league appearance in Toronto since Sept. 19, 2007.

"I think it'll be special," said Janssen, who returned last week after missing all of 2008 with a right shoulder injury. "I'm going to try ... and focus on the game at hand, but it will be special to be back in Toronto in front of the fans. But with Boston, you don't want to be too excited. You want to focus on your job."

Focus is something Janssen knows all about. Anytime a pitcher has an injury to his throwing shoulder, it can be daunting. Yet, in dealing with his injury and the ensuing rehab, Janssen focused on keeping only positive thoughts.

Not once did Janssen, 27, entertain the thought his torn labrum could end his career.

"I think it can overwhelm you if you aren't positive and it could maybe end your career if you have the 'why me's?' or feel sorry for yourself," he said. "I just took my rehab as a challenge.

"Some people did say that it's a lot to come back from, but I wanted to prove the doubters wrong that you can come back, hopefully even better."

Janssen completed the rehab at home in California, where he constantly watched his teammates on television. He says that was by far the toughest part of his injury.

"Not being with the guys — the camaraderie part — was probably the hardest," Janssen said. "Just sitting there watching and being helpless if the team's struggling."

Janssen is finally back with his teammates, who are hoping he will add stability to Toronto's starting staff. Armed with what he calls a new appreciation for his career, Janssen says the injury also taught him a lesson.

"I've learned I'm mentally strong," he said. "I'm able to take the good and bad times the way they are thrown at me, and try to make the most of them."

Hangover star Cooper generating big buzz

STEVE GOW

If the name Bradley Cooper doesn't mean much to you now, it soon will.

Not only does the 34-year old Philadelphia-born actor have a highly-anticipated comedy hitting theatres next Friday, but judging by the full slate of upcoming projects linked to him on the Web (including an adaptation of retro-TV hit, The A-Team), he shouldn't have time to even chat with me.

"It'd be great if it were true," admits Cooper while stopping in Toronto this past week to promote The Hangover. "If I had the career that the Internet said I had, I'd be set."

Mind you, Cooper has no complaints. Having steadily made a name for himself ever since moving to Hollywood to work on TV's Alias, he has risen from sidekick in films like Yes Man and Wedding Crashers to become Hollywood's most promising leading man. According to him, it's a good thing it took so long.

Bradley Cooper, centre, goes in search of a missing groom in The Hangover, in theatres next Friday.

"If (The Hangover) were to be a big hit and change things, it's something I am fearful of and that's a good thing," says the seasoned actor about maintaining perspective. "If I was 24 and my life changed, not only would I be terrified but I'd be terrified for whoever was in my life."

Cooper won't need to speculate much longer. With advance praise being heaped upon it, The Hangover should prove to be the ultimate launching pad for Cooper's career. Playing the mastermind behind a Las Vegas stag party that goes horribly wrong, he sets out to solve the case of the missing groom.

As such, the memory-lapsed lads soon find they're missing teeth, there's a tiger in the hotel bathroom and that they may have just experienced the wildest stag ever. Having fictionally lived through it, there was just one question left — what advice would Mr. Cooper have for bachelors set on Sin City for their stag?

"Wear a condom," says Cooper with a laugh. "Over the whole entire body."

Every Little Step of a musical's life

Every Little Step
Director: Adam Del Deo, James D. Stern
Classification: STC
Rating: ●●●½

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

REVIEW How deeply one is affected by Every Little Step doesn't entirely depend on how familiar you are with Broadway musicals and the private world that pulses in and around that glorious, cutthroat world.

Adam Del Deo and James D. Stern's intimate documentary explores the 2006 revival of late choreographer Michael Bennett's beloved 1974 show A Chorus Line, charting the grueling, alternately rousing and humiliating audition process while serving as a love letter to Bennett's vision. In fact, like the play that spawned it, the picture's sincerity is its greatest strength.

Sifting through a reported 500 hours of footage and condensing the almost year long process into a brisk 96 minutes, Every Little Step is something of a structural marvel.

We get to know a handful of the willing, waiver signing performers who literally lay their souls bare in order to get the coveted, rent-paying and career-making gig of a lifetime; using archive footage and Bennett's original audio interviews, we also simultaneously get an overview of the genesis and reception of the original play.

If you're one of the legions of loyal A Chorus Line devotees or if you're just one of the numerous struggling actors who slog from audition to audition, driven by blind optimism and a love for theatre, you're going to swoon over every inch of Every Little Step.

Fun happens in Hell

Drag Me to Hell
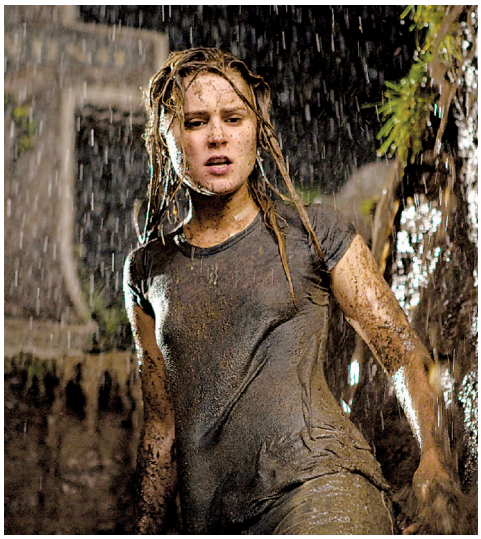
Director: Sam Raimi
Stars: Alison Lohman, Justin Long, Lorna Raver
Classification: 14A
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

After years of applying his signature directorial stamp to various genres and garnering blockbuster success for his Spider-Man movies, Sam Raimi has finally returned to his horror roots with Drag Me to Hell.

Dusting off a script he'd written with brother Ivan shortly after completing the now-iconic Evil Dead trilogy, Raimi dives back into the genre at full force, toying with his audience with the ease and skill of a master.

Drag Me To Hell is easily one of the most entertaining horror movies to hit screens in years, offering a 100-minute barrage of acrobatic camerawork, smash cuts, angry demons, talking goats and the spilling of a variety of bodily fluids.



Alison Lohman stars in Sam Raimi's Drag Me to Hell.

Alison Lohman stars as a bank teller who turns down an old woman's loan to score brownie points with her boss in an attempt to win a promotion. Unfortunately, that old woman just happens to be a gypsy who places a curse on Lohman that will see her pursued by a demon for days before being dragged kicking and screaming into hell.

In terms of plot, that's pretty well it. The film is an exercise in economic storytelling that keeps plot and character development to minimum, dedicating almost all of the screen time to suspense and scares. There's barely any time to catch your breath between the demonic prologue and the crowd-pleasing finale.

Drag Me to Hell is a film that exists entirely on the surface and a few of the major plot turns crumble with any serious thought. But in a movie like this, that's not necessarily a bad thing.

Raimi creates a funhouse atmosphere that earns laughs with practically every scare. He may set out to make audiences jump out of their seats, but it's never to punish the audience or make them uncomfortable.

It's all in good fun and Raimi winks at his audience so many times that you can practically hear him giggling with sadistic glee from behind the camera. You should join him.

Emotional honesty anchors Goodbye

Goodbye Solo
Director: Ramin Bahrani
Stars: Souleymane Sy Savane, Red West
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕

PHIL BROWN

REVIEW Goodbye Solo opens mid-conversation. A man in his 70s with a weathered face that speaks volumes about his life tells his cab driver that he's willing to pay $1,000 for a one-way trip to the top of a mountain in Blowing Rock National Park in 10 days.

The cab driver is a jovial immigrant from Africa who quickly guesses that the old man plans to kill himself. The driver gets concerned and soon becomes the old man's personal driver and confidant. A friendship forms and the pair are even briefly roommates, but the 10-day deadline continues to loom.

Revealing any more about Goodbye Solo would be unfair, but knowing the plot before entering the theatre would hardly kill the movie. Goodbye Solo isn't really about a story or events. It's about people and how we all struggle to find a way to live in this world.

The film is emotionally devastating without a second of manipulation. The audience is simply given the opportunity to watch these two characters interact.

The lead actors (Souleymane Sy Savane as the driver and Red West as the old man) are so perfectly cast that they never feel like characters in a movie.

In Goodbye Solo, Bahrani has crafted a film that is emotionally and thematically complex without ever jamming his intentions down the audience's throat. The movie simply unfolds with an immediacy and honesty that is impossible to ignore.

It's an amazing little film.

Up high point for Pixar

Up

Director: Peter Docter, Bob Peterson
Stars: Ed Asner
Classification: PG
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

Ed Asner voices widower-on-an-adventure Carl Fredrickson in Pixar's Up.

Up's justly celebrated prologue chronicles the transformation of one Carl Fredrickson (voiced by Ed Asner) from wide-eyed child to stooped widower, and rarely has exposition seemed so elegant.

Directors Bob Peterson and Pete Docter manage to collapse an entire life into 15 minutes, rendering joy and despair in a series of precise, suggestive tableaux.

Heartbroken at the death of his wife and hoping to honour her adventurous spirit (and also to stick it to the real estate developers trying to buy up his property), Carl affixes a massive bunch of multicolored balloons to his ramshackle house and boldly soars into the stratosphere.

The sequence in which he takes flight is a stunner, and the floating house is an obvious allusion to The Wizard of Oz. But the images get even stronger after our hero touches down in South America.

When Carl drags his hovering home behind him like an oversized kite, it's a metaphor for the burden of memory that's no less potent for being rather obvious.

Gradually, the tone tilts towards comedy, as the appearance of a mythical jungle bird gives Carl and his cheerful cub-scout stowaway a hilarious anthropomorphic foil.

But the best-in-show prize goes to the bird's pursuers, a group of dogs who, for reasons not worth spoiling here, have been outfitted with collars that give electronic voice to their thoughts — or more accurately their lack thereof.

It's an insanely inspired conceit, and it elevates Up above the CGI pretenders into the rarified realm of Pixar's best work.

Too quirky for own good

Let Him Be

Director: Peter McNamee
Stars: Sean Clement, Kathleen Munroe
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕½

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Imagine cross-pollinating the legacy of iconic slain pop star John Lennon with the forced rube shenanigans of Corner Gas and you get the idea of what Peter McNamee's silly faux-documentary Let Him Be is all about.

The absurd opus charts the misadventures of two undergrad film students/lovers (played by charming unknowns Sean Clement and Kathleen Munroe) who inadvertently discover some home movie footage that appears to depict a well-aged John Lennon strumming a guitar at a children's birthday party.

Packing their film equipment and jumping in their car, the two would-be cinematic sleuths head up to a remote Northern Ontario town where they begin grilling the oh-so-quirky locals about the identity of the Lennon look-alike with the hope that the mystery man might actually be the real Mccoy.

Their weird road leads to some occasionally witty observations on celebrity and imitation Lennon twang rock.

Part conspiracy theory skewering (what if Lennon survived his own murder, moved to Canada and kept rocking?), and part Can-con farce, the film is certainly original.

But after an oddball, funny first half, it all bogs down rather briskly and by the end of it, with all its cute small town whimsy, ends up walking the line of obnoxious.

But the biggest bummer about Let Him Be is the fact that it's non-existent budget dictates that not one Beatles tune is quoted in whole or in part.

A CLASSIC; EXCELLENT; GOOD; FAIR; POOR

Little merit to Virtue

Easy Virtue

Director: Stephan Elliott
Stars: Jessica Biel, Ben Barnes
Classification: STC
Rating:

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Jessica Biel stars as an American racecar driver who marries a Brit aristocrat in Easy Virtue.

Based on a little-known Noel Coward play from 1924, Easy Virtue is far from virtuous and anything but easy to watch.

In fact, what could've been a scathing indictment on aristocratic hypocrisy ends up mostly toothless, gumming at the satire like an old man eating pudding without his dentures.

In the early-20th century comic-drama, Jessica Biel (The Illusionist) plays a free-spirited American racecar driver who marries naïve John (Ben Barnes), an upper-crust Brit whose family is at odds with the new kin, especially John's snooty mom (Kristin Scott Thomas) who sets out to subvert the matrimony.

Naturally, this conflict would either logically give way to suspense (as Alfred Hitchcock attempted in a 1928 adaptation) or humour. Unfortunately for Easy Virtue, it does neither effectively, instead feeding us mostly gags that are heavy-handed and obvious — especially one overplayed sequence involving the family's beloved-but-doomed Chihuahua.

The film's performances are satisfying enough and while Easy Virtue's themes of recession in the mid-1920s may seem surprisingly poignant, a bewildering tone lacks the focus required to land a punch.

Things just get weirder by the time you hear Barnes crooning a jazzy version of Billy Ocean's When the Going Gets Tough. Because when that happens, the tough get going.

Authentic look at world of women

Mothers & Daughters

Director: Car Bessai
Stars: Babz Chula, Camille Sullivan, Gabrielle Rose
Classification: STC
Rating:

ANNE BRODIE
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Carl Bessai's spirited look into the lives of mothers and daughters is a terrific, meaty surprise, that's as entertaining as it is moving. It's provocative and intimate and sure to awaken the desire to connect more authentically with family.

And it's not so unusual that Bessai delves into the world of women — he's taken that trip before.

That most mysterious of bonds is described in a loosely interwoven anthology dotted with documentary-style interviews. It's scripted and improvised, raw and intense and at times and hilarious. Its acute observations and details are lifelike.

Bessai navigates the crises of six characters, an ambitious undertaking for a 85-minute film. A wife is recently deserted, her relentlessly ambitious daughter is embarrassed by what she sees as her mother's failures; a pregnant yuppie finds solace and wisdom in a woman painter working on her house; and a pair of battling broads share a house; a writer and her daughter, a poet, who are locked in violent co-dependence. Each story is heartbreaking but ultimately hopeful.

The "interviews" are revealing. The characters pronounce themselves innocent victims of parent/child manipulations and then tear up recognizing their own guilt and unfulfilled dreams of loving understanding. It's how they process these feelings that bring the film into focus.

Respect, or die

Curse film returns with Raimi

"(Curse films) boil down to one universal theme: Lack of respect has consequences. Think of that the next time a 106-year-old witch asks for a favour."

In Drag Me to Hell director Sam (Spiderman) Raimi returns to his horror roots, reviving a dormant fright genre — the curse film.

There was a time on the big screen when old crones and evil wizards terrorized movie goers with spells, and I don't mean the cute and cuddly curse of Shrek, I mean heavy hexes like the Maloika and Voodoo juju.

In 1996 a film based on a novel from Stephen King's alter ego Richard Bachman called Thinner offered a supernatural alternative to Weight Watchers. The story centred on Billy Halleck (Robert John Burke), a sleazebag lawyer charged with vehicular manslaughter after running down an old woman.

The obese legal wiz beats the charge in court, but a far worse verdict awaits him outside the courtroom. Minutes after he is set free a 106-year-old gypsy named Tadzu Lemke (Michael Constantine) touches him, whispering the word "thinner" in his ear.

From then on, Halleck sheds pounds faster than you can say "Jenny Craig." Using all his lawyerly skills of persuasion he convinces Lemke to lift the curse, but the resolution has tragic consequences for those around him.

A different kind of curse was unleashed in the 2003 Japanese J-Horror film Juon: The Grudge. The movie is only occasionally scary, but the idea of a curse, born of great violence, that continues to grow like a virus and visit terror on everyone who comes into contact with it, is undeniably creepy.

Probably the only curse film to be deemed "culturally, historically, or aesthetically significant" by the United States National Film Registry is Walt Disney's animated Beauty and the Beast. The story begins with an old beggar woman asking a handsome but spoiled prince for shelter against the bitter cold.

Repulsed by her appearance he refuses her request and pays ment of a rose. She warns the prince not to judge people by their appearances but he is unmoved. Unmoved, that is until she lays the kavorka on him, turning him into a hideous beast.

The curse, she says, can only be lifted if "he could learn to love another, and earn her love in return" by the time his twenty-first birthday came around and the last petal of woman's enchanted rose fell to the ground.

Despite their differences in topic and setting these movies all boil down to one universal theme: Lack of respect has consequences. Think of that the next time a 106 year-old witch asks for a favour.

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrchaos33@hotmail.com.

In the 2003 Japanese J-Horror film Juon: The Grudge a curse is born out of great violence.

New 20 smart little indie film

REVIEW 40 Is The New 20 is the latest low-budget indie from Quebec filmmaker Simon Boisvert. Released in a season dominated by $100 million spectacle, Boisvert's movie is a small and intimate dramedy about the challenges of being middle aged.

It's not exactly the type of movie that will have teenagers climbing over each other to get to the multiplex, but it should be a pleasant surprise for an older crowd looking for something different.

The title suggests that the film celebrates the joys of being a single 40-year-old in today's middle-aged obsessed culture. Fortunately, the title is ironic and the movie actually shows the absurdity of that concept.

Pat Mastroianni (Degrassi Junior High's Joey Jeremiah) stars as Gary, a successful stockbroker who is thrilled to discover that his former high school sweetheart Jennifer (Claudia Ferri) has transferred into his office. He is determined to restart the relationship.

Unfortunately, Jennifer doesn't feel the same way, but Gary refuses to take "no" for an answer. At first his advances are merely irritating, but soon he becomes obsessive and starts monitoring her emails and phone calls with the help of a foul-mouthed best friend (Bruce Dinsmore).

The film ends on a deeply cynical note that turns the title on its head. A lesser movie would have pushed for a happy ending, but Boisvert sticks to his guns and is backed up by two lead actors who can handle the challenging roles.

There are certainly flaws, but most of them have to do with the low budget (the DV photography isn't amateurish, but it's not film either) and Boisvert's occasional understandable linguistic struggle in his first outing in the English.

40 Is The New 20 will never become a contemporary classic. But taken on it's own terms, this is a smart and satisfying little movie.

Surgeon champions gentle hero

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

"(Dr. Henry Marsh) is my voice that I use in the film to ask these kind of moral questions about humanity. He is a surgeon, but also an artist, in every respect, and I think the film proves this."
Director Geoffrey Smith

FEATURE There are many elements that unite all humanity, but the grimmest and most sobering is that, like it or not, we're all going to die. And for many of us, that end will come slowly and perhaps even painfully.

That's where Dr. Henry Marsh comes in. The dedicated MD has devoted his life to prolonging the lives of those stricken down by terminal illness and he's also the subject of the shattering, award-winning film The English Surgeon, opening in Toronto next week for a limited engagement.

Directed by Geoffrey Smith, the film follows the gentle, heroic Dr. Marsh as he travels from his U.K. home with simple medical tools to a woefully impoverished pocket of Ukraine where he offers aid and humanity to people who otherwise have little hope.

And though The English Surgeon is most assuredly documenting a harsh reality, it also boasts scene after scene of richly detailed imagery and is laced with liberal doses of mood and tone that make it nothing short of cinematic.

"That quality is intentional," admits Smith of his critically acclaimed picture.

"The subject here is life and death, the cornerstone of serious drama and it was always designed to be shot, structured and edited as such.

"It's not just about Henry's moral struggle to do good things in the world, but about the relationship between doctor and patient, perhaps the last sacred relationship."

Further enriching the emotional impact of The English Surgeon is the film's understated achingly mournful score, composed and performed by iconic Australian pop poet Nick Cave and his long time collaborator Warren Ellis.

Smith believes the good doctor approves of his inspiring screen rendered exploits.

"He's very fond of it, I think," says the director. "Henry's my voice that I use in the film to ask these kind of moral questions about humanity. He is a surgeon, but also an artist, in every respect, and I think the film proves this."

Mandy Moore grows up

Former pop star and teen idol evolves into mature songwriter

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

If you haven't figured it out yet, Mandy Moore isn't the 15-year-old Britney-wannabe she once was. Now, at 25, she's a wife, an accomplished actor and a folk singer — and she wants you to know that her pop past is behind her.

"I don't look back on those years too fondly," she says over the phone. "It was a bit embarrassing what I was doing then. It wasn't the quality pop others were creating in the late '90s."

She's right. The former pop starlet, who rose to fame in 1999 with the middling, sugar coated track Candy, was trying to compete with Spears and Christina Aguilera, but her music mostly fell flat.

Part of the reason for that, she says, was that she didn't have control over her work, so it wasn't only up to her which songwriters she chose to work with.

"It's not like I was a puppet when I was kid, and I enjoyed most of what I was doing, but I would have chosen to work with different people or make a different kind of music," she reveals.

The road from teen idol to do-it-yourself songwriter has been a long and challenging one, though some people still think Moore has shifted gears over night. That thinking frustrates her.

Mandy Moore's new album, Amanda Leigh, is out on June 2.

"I fought really hard to get here and I understand that I'm not going to be everyone's cup of tea," she says. "The only thing I take offense with is the idea that all of a sudden I wanted to be different. No, I'm 25 years old. I've been working a while to get where I am. It's funny to me that people would assume that it's some crazy idea to want to be someone different. It's just a natural evolution. People are allowed to grow up and evolve."

Moore's first significant step away from the pop star shackles came when she recorded Coverage, a record of covers that included her takes on Cat Stevens's Moonshadow and Carly Simon's Anticipation. She admits that she just recorded songs she liked, despite knowing the record label would disapprove.

"It's funny to me that people would assume that it's some crazy idea to want to be someone different. It's just a natural evolution. People are allowed to grow up and evolve."
Mandy Moore

Soon after that album was released she left her label and began writing the material that, she hopes, defines her today. The new disc, Amanda Leigh (her first and middle names), picks up where her last disc, Wild Hope, left off. It's full of passionate acoustic tunes about love, a few louder rockers — though nothing remotely close to her old material — and even a strong, finger-picking folk tune (Bug).

It's not earth shattering stuff, but it's clear that Moore is turning into a bonafide songwriter.

It helps that her new hubby is acclaimed musician Ryan Adams — they married in March — who likely could teach her a thing or two about writing infectious and well-respected albums, but for now their two careers are staying separate.

"When you're with someone who's in (the) same line of work as you, you can't help but be slightly influenced and inspired by them," she says. "But Ryan has his own thing going on as I do. I think he's the best at what he does, and I appreciate the support he has in my life, but we're going to keep our two careers and choices quite separate."

Grizzly Bear mauls Twitter

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

Grizzly Bear is a busy band — they're at the beginning of a two month tour, and they just released their new disc Veckatimest — but singer Ed Droste still finds time to Twitter. Not only does the Brooklyn-based songwriter use the social networking site to chat with fans, he tweets at least four or five times a day.

"Someone signed me on over a year ago," he says, almost apologetic that he's such an avid Twitter user. "At first I was confused, I just posted once, but I recently re-logged in and now I get it. But I feel conflicted about it."

Droste uses Twitter to connect with fans, which is a good thing as Droste offers regular updates on live shows and information about the band's new record.

"We didn't want to rush ourselves — everything was natural and organic."
Ed Droste

One thing he hasn't tweeted about, however, is why he chose such a peculiar name for the band's sophomore full-length. Droste explains, over the phone, that the disc's moniker comes from an uninhabited island near Cape Cod, where they recorded.

"We like to name albums based on where we're doing them," he says, adding that the band's first disc, Yellow House, was recorded in a place that was just that. "We didn't go on the island, but we liked the abstract nature of it."

While the way they name their discs hasn't changed, how they create them has. On Yellow House Droste and his co-songwriter Daniel Rossen brought already finished tracks to the rest of the band. This time around they started from scratch.

"We came into this with a blank slate," says Droste. "We'd take weekend trips out of town to see what we could come up with. We didn't want to rush ourselves — everything was natural and organic."

The result is another indie folk disc filled with copious amounts of Beach Boys-like harmonies. While it's similar to Yellow House, its stronger focus and even more layered vocals prove that their new songwriting strategy has worked wonders.

Droste thinks the more inclusive writing approach has helped too. "The instrumentation and vocals are clearer; the drums are louder; there's a stronger sense of confidence," he says. "Everyone is a lot more at ease with their abilities and, also, since the last album, everyone's grown up."

Veckatimest is the latest album from Grizzly Bear.

Napster changed the face of music

File sharing service launched 10 years ago

SoundCheck

Ten years ago this Monday — June 1, 1999 — the music industry as we knew it ceased to exist. It was brought down by a 19-year-old C-level college kid.

Shawn Fanning was good at two things: Baseball (he once hit .650 for his high school team) and writing code. With his Uncle John's $7,000 laptop, Shawn worked a program that could find MP3 files on the Internet, eliminating the need for Alta Vista and Hotbot. (No one had heard of Google yet.) Shawn worked on the code through the winter of 1998-99.

By the beginning of June, the bugs were out and Shawn gave the program to 30 online friends with instructions not to share it with anyone else. Within days, though, 15,000 people were using it. The program would spread to reach more than 26 million users in less than 18 months before the whole thing came crashing down in a series of lawsuits.

Napster — named after Shawn's short, nappy Marine-cut hair — was the beginning of the end of the business model the record industry had followed since Edison and Berliner started selling recorded music more than a hundred years earlier. Things haven't been the same since.

What's fascinating, though, is that even in the midst of all the very public legal battles involving Metallica and the RIAA, several of the major labels came very, very close to buying a big stake in Napster. On July 15, 2000, just as the number of Napster users passed 20 million, there was a secret meeting in Sun Valley, Idaho. In the room were a big venture capitalist and some very high-ranking executives representing Universal, Sony and BMG, three of the five major labels that existed at the time.

"Napster ... was the beginning of the end of the business model the record industry had followed."

The people representing Napster wanted a 50-50 split of any future equity in the company. The record company executives wouldn't settle for anything less than a 90-10 split in their favour. Naturally, the party broke up, the lawsuits went ahead and Napster was squashed. (The name was later resurrected in the form of a legal download store.)

Remember that this was six months before iTunes debuted and more than a year before the first iPod came out. Makes you wonder where we might be now had things worked out, doesn't it?

Eminem's Relapse is the top debut of 2009

CHARTS Eminem's new album, Relapse, has sold more copies in its first week of release than any other album this year.

Nielsen SoundScan says the Detroit rapper's first album in nearly five years sold 608,000 copies.

Relapse is Eminem's fifth straight No. 1 album. His last disc, 2004's Encore, sold 711,000 in its first week — though that was across only four days. It went on to sell 5.1 million copies.

Last week's chart topper, Green Day's 21st Century Breakdown, slid to No. 2, adding 166,000 copies sold to the 215,000 copies the band sold in its initial, abbreviated three-day sales week.

MICHAEL STUPARYK/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Chef Jamie Oliver is premiering his new four-part special, Jamie's Ministry of Food, starting next Thursday.

The multi-tasking chef

Jamie Oliver serves up a full menu with three new TV specials

Jamie Oliver was not born with a silver spoon in his mouth — but with a wooden spoon in his hand.

The TV chef's parents owned a pub in Essex north east of London, and Oliver helped his parents in the kitchen of The Cricketers from a very early age.

"My mum and dad would never give me a thing, they would make me earn it," says Oliver. "I worked a lot, and I enjoyed it."

Oliver will be serving up a full menu of television programs on the Food Network in the months ahead. The network is premiering his new four-part special, Jamie's Ministry of Food, starting next Thursday, along with two one-hour specials, Eat To Save Your Life and Jamie's Fowl Dinners later this summer.

It seems to be "classic Oliver" to have more than one thing on the go. Those who say that men cannot multi-task have not met the chef.

He has had a few years to practise, though. Since he was "discovered" at 21 when the BBC did a program on Italian food, which was filmed in the restaurant where Oliver was a sous chef, the now 33-year-old chef has lived life in the fast lane.

He has had more than 10 TV programs, published more than 10 cookbooks, turned semi-criminal youngsters into star chefs at his 15 restaurants and made the British government invest millions of pounds in the improvement of the unhealthy food served in the country's schools.

He has also cooked for U.S. President Barack Obama, amongst others, and had three daughters — the newest one earlier this year.

"Sometimes I pinch myself and think, 'F— me, I just cooked for 20 world leaders' or 'I just had the third kid — is that me?' But I've always felt ready," he says. "At 21, when I did The Naked Chef, I never said I was the best chef in the world, but there were some things that I was bloody good at and I felt completely confident sharing that."

Oliver has no plans whatsoever to slow down even though there is — in his own words — a piece of paper telling him what he will be doing every single day, every hour for the next 18 months.

"I could retire, but why would I? I feel young and I still have a lot of dreams," he says. "I don't think me sitting down will help me fulfill them. Being commercial but having a heart is the Holy Grail. I think our generation and those who are younger like to feel like we're part of something that makes a difference, adds value, makes the world a better place."

They obviously were saving the best for last this week at the Shaw Festival, where a sparkling, scintillating, sensational revival of Garson Kanin's Born Yesterday opened at the Festival Theatre.

You'd have to go back a decade (to Christopher Newton's 1999 gossamer take on Noel Coward's Easy Virtue) to find a production so deftly accomplished and sleekly delightful as this one.

As soon as the curtain rises on Sue LePage's spectacular hotel suite setting, you get the sense things are going well.

Then, after director Gina Wilkinson has proven she knows how to stage physical comedy by giving us some deft interaction among the staff, your level of anticipation will rise even higher.

But it's when each member of the cast comes on, acting their parts exquisitely, you'll finally settle back in your seat and say, "This is what theatre is supposed to be like."

Kanin's 1946 comedy is more than a slickly written entertainment; it also has quite a lot that's still valid to say about how big business tries to prove it can manipulate the forces of government to its own ends, regardless of the ethics involved.

Deborah Hay oozes glamour as that archetypal dumb blond, Billie Dawn, in the Shaw's Born Yesterday.

He does this by means of a skillful Cinderella/Pygmalion story about Billie Dawn, a singularly vapid former chorus girl ("In Anything Goes, I had lines," she boasts).

Dawn is the mistress of a former junk merchant named Harry Brock who has become very rich by bending the law (and the people who try to keep it intact) until they break.

Then when they do finally shatter, he gets someone else to hide the pieces.

He's come to Washington, D.C., with his sleazy alcoholic lawyer to "buy" a corruptible senator and see that a major amendment favouring Brock's agenda gets through Congress.

But Brock finds Billie a bit too stupid for the capital scene, so he gets a young left-wing journalist to take some of the intellectual rough edges off her.

What he doesn't count on is triggering a major intellectual awakening that will make his whole sleazy empire come tumbling down at his feet.

Director Wilkinson, making her Shaw debut, has a real knack for playing it as it lays, letting the funny stuff hit hilarity, the romantic sequences achieve heartthrob and the ideological scenes make their points as well.

Of course, the whole show rises or falls on the interpretation of Billie Dawn, and Deborah Hay couldn't be better. Her voice is just squeaky enough, her eyes sufficiently myopic, her hips possessing the right amount of swing.

She's a real cupcake, but there's a candy heart beating inside and a layer of bittersweet chocolate frosting to give her the right intellectual edge.

First you laugh at her, then you laugh with her, then you cheer for her ... which is just how it ought to be. She's absolute perfection, but then, so is this whole production.

Guitar Hero ready to rock again

Activision, publisher of the best-selling music game series Guitar Hero, is looking to expand its audience with this fall's Guitar Hero 5, with new features designed for casual players and die-hard fans alike.

"We've enhanced the entire experience around social play," said Activision senior vice-president Will Kassoy. Players will be able to jump in and out of songs and change the difficulty level on the fly. GH5 will also allow any combination of fake instruments, so if everyone wants to play drums, they can.

For more serious shredders, GH5 developer RedOctane is adding a variety of challenges that pit players against friends at home or online. One game, for example, eliminates weaker performers until there's only one rocker standing.

Guitar Hero is also enjoying its status as a star-maker for bands like Wolfmother, which got a boost when its Woman appeared on Guitar Hero II. The Australian metal band rushed to finish Back Round to meet RedOctane's deadline for the new game. "They're just a perfect fit for Guitar Hero," said Steve Sherr of Interscope, Wolfmother's label.

Sherr said another Interscope act stands to gain from its first video-game appearance. TV on the Radio is one of the most acclaimed bands in the United States, but its sales haven't kept pace with its critical reputation. "Guitar Hero 5 will expose millions of people to the band," Sherr said.

Others on the 82-band roster include the usual suspects (Bon Jovi, Iron Maiden, Queens of the Stone Age), some fresh faces (Band of Horses, Arctic Monkeys, Vampire Weekend) and a few classic rockers who are new to the franchise (Tom Petty, John Mellencamp, Elton John).

Guitar Hero 5 will reach stores Sept. 1, a week before The Beatles: Rock Band from rival MTV Games.

Cleveland bites back at comic's joke

COMEDY Come to Cleveland, where the economy is based on LeBron James, the streets are filled with drifters and broken-down homes can be had for the price of a VCR.

A comedian's sarcastic YouTube music videos trashing Cleveland have so unnerved tourism officials that they asked residents to fire back with videos of their own showing the city is not really the "Mistake on the Lake."

But take it easy, Cleveland. Mike Polk, 31, a hometown comic and video producer, said his two videos — which also maligned the city for such things as its abandoned buildings and polluted waters — were all in fun.

"I don't really believe all of the fish in Lake Erie have AIDS," said Polk, whose YouTube contribution to Cleveland's inferiority complex landed him a job judging the mostly feel-good contest videos.

The winner of the contest, to be announced Thursday, gets a Cleveland travel package, including a stay in a hotel, dinner and passes to attractions.

Farley follows his nose in spinoff adventure book

BOOKS For her 30th anniversary, Lynn Johnston has branched out from comic strip to children's lit.

But she hasn't strayed too far: fans will see a familiar, big, fuzzy face in the main character of Farley Follows His Nose.

In her debut children's book with sister-in-law Beth Cruikshank, Johnston says she used the Old English sheepdog from her beloved, long-running For Better or for Worse comic — which happens to be three decades old this September and has had a phenomenal run in at least 20 countries.

"I get to draw the dog, which I love to draw; it was an opportunity to see him big, and do a lot of expression and colour," said the North Bay-based Johnston in a recent interview.

"In the breeze he smelled rosesfreshcutgrasssweatypeoplethecatnextdoor."

The book, aimed at kids from kindergarten to Grade 3, follows Farley as he sniffs around in his neighbourhood. The different smells he picks up are showcased in a wavy line of text at the bottom of pages, in a stream-of-consciousness mode: "... in the breeze he smelled rosesfreshcutgrasssweatypeoplethecatnextdoor ..."

Farley heads to a birthday party after picking up the scent of hotdogs and popcorn, then takes a trip to an unfamiliar town, then finds his way back and helps a lost little boy from the party return home before getting home himself.

Cruikshank is a veterinarian, and the two worked together on the story after Johnston was contacted by HarperCollins Canada. A portion of royalties earned goes to the Farley Foundation, which helps families pay vet bills they otherwise couldn't afford.

Johnston said she did the illustrations for Farley first in pencil, then ink, before a watercolourist put on the finishing touches. The book took about a year from start to finish.

Farley, the family dog in For Better or For Worse, heads on a smelly adventure in comic artist Lynn Johnston's new kid's book.

She enjoyed the process: "You don't get an opportunity to draw much when you are drawing (comic) panels," she said. "I love to draw."

Farley was named after Canadian author Farley Mowat and is based on a real dog Johnston once owned. The dog was jealous of her son, "So I flipped a coin and the dog lost — he went to a happy home on a farm."

Her goal in working on a children's book was to have fun.

"You want to have young children enjoy it and the parent enjoy reading it to a child," she said. A friend recently read the book aloud to a kindergarten class, "who really enjoyed it because it was about smells."

And neither Johnston, nor Farley, are done quite yet: She's already working on another storyline for the loveable sheepdog.

Let the Happiness Project reign

Sunny Side

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

It's nearly impossible to find any uplifting stories on the news these days — the economy's still crashing, people are losing jobs — so when an album titled the Happiness Project comes out, you can't help wonder if the disc is just a sarcastic joke. Turns out Charles Spearin's debut record, which came out in February, is as uplifting as the title suggests.

The Happiness Project isn't a collection of infectious pop tunes, though — far from it. Spearin, who makes his living as a member of Broken Social Scene and Do May Say Think, recorded his neighbours talking about what makes them happy, and then put music to the melodies of their voices. The result is a thought provoking, avant garde look at what makes people tick.

"I geared the conversation towards what they thought was important in life, specifically happiness," says Spearin. "The subject of happiness has naïve connotations, but at the same time it's what everyone wants in life. People say they want peace or justice or health and money, but those are all means to happiness."

"People say they want peace or justice or health and money, but those are all means to happiness."
Charles Spearin

The irony of releasing something called the Happiness Project as Canadians become increasingly worried about life is not lost on Spearin, but there is something all those anxious people can take away from this record.

"Happiness isn't totally dependent on economics," says Spearin. "Generally, there's a certain point where you have to gave certain amount of wealth to get by, but when you reach that point, happiness and wealth have very little to do with each other. My neighbours are saying happiness is love. That's important to remember when the economic situation isn't so good."

For Spearin, happiness is about family — he has two children — and community, so it makes sense that he recorded his daughter and his neighbours. He could have recorded his many musician friends too, but he wanted to keep the stories as local as possible.

"My neighbourhood has become more important to me now that I have two little kids," he explains. "It's a bigger part of my life right now. I spend a lot of time on the porch. Downtown Toronto has plenty of problems, but it's a really vibrant and healthy place and I wanted to represent that. And, the more I travel the more I appreciate where I come from."

Capturing the neighbourhood's positive mood was, to Spearin's surprise, relatively easy. He says that the stories, and the accompanying music, came naturally. "There were moments in what people said that was quite beautiful and inspiring," he says.

It's easy to see that Spearin is thrilled with the end result, but so are his interview subjects. "Mrs. Morris (the woman talking in the track Mrs. Morris) gave me a call the day after we preformed the album in Toronto and said she felt like a new born baby, because she got so many hugs at the show."

If that's not happiness, then what is?

Boyle faces final hurdle to fame

It's always a bad hair day for Susan Boyle — until she starts to sing.

The Scottish songbird with the frizzed-out hair doesn't look like a star — she's chubby, with plain features and no thousand-watt showbiz smile. But her golden voice has made her the overwhelming favourite in Saturday's Britain's Got Talent finals, expected to draw millions of viewers in Britain, where it's broadcast live, and tens of millions throughout the world, with the help of YouTube and other online sites.

If she can prevail over nine competitors, the overnight singing sensation from a hardscrabble village in Scotland would pocket 100,000 pounds (C$178,000) and an invitation to perform at a Royal Variety Show in front of the Queen.

With her high-profile fans — including actress Demi Moore, expected to jet in for the finals — and an appearance on the Oprah Winfrey show, Boyle has far overshadowed the other contestants. But she still must excel Saturday night and hope that none of her rivals generate enough magic to win over the frequently fickle British public.

"I think with the swell of public sympathy behind her, she could win this competition, and from that I think she could have a very successful album and probably one successful world tour because people will be curious to see her," said Neil Warnock, chief executive of The Agency Group, which represents dozens of top musicians.

He cautioned, however, that fame may be fleeting.

It will be much more challenging, he said, for Boyle to perform an entire live show on a concert tour than to sing one three-minute number on TV.

Even if she stumbles, a professional career seems likely. She's been offered a recording contract and her huge name recognition would give any debut but offering a fighting chance. But a poor performance Saturday might relegate her to flash-in-the-pan status in a disposable celebrity culture that makes and breaks stars at warp speed.

The hugely successful talent show has its roots in Britain's music hall tradition, which brought performing dogs, ersatz magicians, ventriloquists and fire-eaters to hundreds of towns and villages in the days before television. Warnock said this is part of the charm.

"We tend to make fun of the very, very stupid acts, but it has its own Englishness and its own eccentricity and we love that," said Warnock. "And you see a spark of genuine talent every once in a while."

The ten finalists all have stars — and dollar signs — in their eyes. But the real financial rewards will have to wait until after the competition. Boyle has already had phenomenal success on YouTube, where her first round performance has generated more than 175 million views, but those legions of fans do not bring her any cash.

"I think she could have a very successful album and probably one successful world tour."

Old concerts coming to iTunes

ANNA SAJECKI
for Metro Canada

Richard Kahl was a 16-year-old kid with musical aspirations when Bob Dylan first performed Maggie's Farm at the 1965 Newport Folk Festival.

"I remember hanging around my musician friends, and people were using the word 'traitor,'" says Kahl, who plays in a Toronto Bob Dylan tribute band. "But I thought the move was fabulous and gutsy — that song changed the face of folk music."

Now, vintage footage of that very concert and others have been remastered and are being made available through iTunes for download. It is part of a series of iconic musical performances distributed through a new label, Digital Video Singles (DVS).

Focusing around the pre-MTV era (1955 to 1981), DVS is releasing performances by artists such as The Moody Blues, Al Green, Paul McCartney, Tina Turner, Eric Clapton, the Velvet Underground and the Kinks. Never before has iTunes offered vintage video footage.

"In most cases people haven't seen (these performances) in 40 years."
Richard Kahl

The DVS label is created by OVOW Communications, Inc., which works directly with the artists to digitally enhance archived material and make it available to the public.

"Any time these artists would go on tour they would always appear on these local television programs in France and Germany, and they would play live," says Stuart Samuels, the co-owner of OVOW. "We went through these archives, thousands of hours of stuff, and have called out these performances that in most cases people haven't seen in 40 years."

Samuels is based in Toronto, but works internationally with a music clearance specialist and a film and video archivist to uncover video of these iconic music moments.

"I think this will be a very popular feature," says Gale Averill, a music history professor at the University of Toronto. "This meets the increasing demand for classic rock, and the increasing size and number of niche groups devoted to the consumption of the more arcane corners of human expressive culture."

The moment Dylan first performed Maggie's Farm was one of the most critical in music history, and marked the musician's transition to electric music. While Dylan was largely criticized for abandoning his folk roots, Kahl says he knew the moment meant music had changed forever — just as it had when The Beatles first broke onto the scene.

"I may not have known exactly what Maggie's Farm was about, but I knew it was real, and I knew it was poetry," says Kahl.

Whether the vintage video performances will appeal to younger generations is debatable. Eric Choi, a 30-year-old Markham graphic designer, owns an iPhone and sometimes downloads music using iTunes. He says, however, he prefers to download more current music.

"I listen to and download a lot of ''80s music, especially very slow soft rock music," he says. "But '60s music, I think that appeals more to my parents."

Kahl, who is now in his 50s, says he knows plenty of people who will download the video footage.

"This is huge for people my own age," says Kahl. "It allows us to go back to living in the day. People who haven't seen the performance can see it for the first time, and those who have are going to be able to watch it at home — maybe with the same people they watched it with originally."

Summertime screenings

Film Circuit takes movies to warm-weather locales

If you're looking to check out an arthouse flick this summer, there may be no need to head down to your local theatre.

In Gimli, Man., they'll be watching movies on the beach. In Windsor, Ont., films will unspool at a local winery, while cinema fans in Hubbards, N.S., will watch the action play out in a barn. It's part of a Toronto International Film Festival program designed to bring lesser-known films to smaller communities.

"People don't want to sit in a dark cinema while the sun is out," says Robin Rhodes, senior manager of the Film Circuit, a volunteer-driven roadshow funded by Telefilm Canada and TIFF sponsors.

"Even when they do go to the cinema during the summer, it's always sort of the really big blockbuster sort of films that are out there."

The Film Circuit works with roughly 200 organizations to bring films year-round to about 160 smaller communities that wouldn't otherwise get a chance to see foreign, avant-garde or homegrown indie projects.

Its biggest seasons are fall and spring, since getting folks to the theatre in summer has traditionally been a hard sell, says Rhodes, noting much of the Film Circuit's targeted audience heads on vacation or prefers to spend time with family during the hotter months.

But things have changed in recent years as the circuit teams up with small film festivals and ventures into favourite summertime locales, he says.

The Film Circuit group in Windsor is one of the best-attended summer screening programs in the country, with outdoor sessions taking place this year at the Colio Estate Wines and the Sprucewood Estate Winery.

"They have portable 35-millimetre equipment and they just roll it out to wineries and bus people out there and do this whole sort of wine and hors d'oeuvres kind of thing," says Rhodes.

Other communities are incorporating film-viewing into their beach fun. Manitoba's Gimli Film Festival in Gimli (running July 24-28) and the Beach Blanket Film Festival in Penticton, B.C. (July 17-19) will each set up a screen offshore."People just sort of show up down at the lake and they watch a movie projected out on the lake which is kind of cool," says Rhodes.

It's easy to see the appeal of taking films out of the multiplex, says Rhodes, noting that many of the outdoor events are free. "For so long, people have been sitting in the dark together in theatres and sort of quietly watching movies," says Rhodes.

"If you're not watching movies at home, you're watching them in a theatre and that's pretty much it and that sort of drive-in experience is gone. I would argue that people are missing that sort of alternate venue.... We're Canadians, we're butchered most of the year with the winter and to be able to sort of sit outside I think is a desirable thing."

Idol Adam: I'm an unlikely role model

NEWFOUND FAME Adam Lambert says role models come in different forms — even in eye makeup, fingernail polish and tight pants, people.com reports.

"It's a really, really cool thing," the American Idol runner-up says, "to be able to show people that you can be yourself, and you should be proud of yourself, and you should own who you are and what you're about, and never make apologies for it."

So to those who speculate about his sexuality, he has a message. "Calm down," he says, and "keep speculating."

Lambert, 27, who finished second to Kris Allen in the show that ended May 20, says his comfort with himself can serve as an example. "It feels really amazing to be able to try and pass that on to kids and young adults who don't have a role model like that," he says. "It feels great because I never had a role model like that."

As for all the talk about his personal life, Lambert says just one word when asked if he'll address his sexuality directly in an upcoming issue of Rolling Stone: "Maybe."

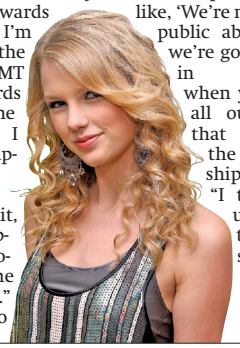
Taylor's love philosophy

YOUNG AND IDEALISTIC Singer-songwriter Taylor Swift doesn't follow a rulebook when it comes to dating, people.com reports.

"I don't look for boyfriends. I don't really scour the awards shows for who I'm going to date," the 19-year-old CMT Music Awards nominee tells the media. "But I think love happens when you're not looking for it, and when it happens, I'm not going to be the one to overthink it."



Swift, who once dated Joe Jonas of the Jonas Brothers, says it doesn't matter what her love interest does or how he affects her career.

"When you strategize a relationship too much, like, 'We're not gonna be public about it, and we're gonna say this in interviews,' when you think it all out, I think that complicates the relationship," she says, "I think that's unfair for the relationship."

Dad offered Bristol car to dump Levi

PARENTING On multiple occasions, Todd Palin offered to buy his daughter Bristol a car if she would break up Levi Johnston, according to an upcoming GQ article, usmagazine.com reports.

New York magazine obtained an advance copy of the story, which features a photo of a shirtless Levi, 19, putting a diaper on a baby.

In the story, Levi says getting back together with Bristol, 18, is "not even in" his mind.

After welcoming son Tripp in December, Levi and Bristol announced in March that they would split.

Things turned frosty earlier this spring when Levi went on a press tour, declaring on The Tyra Banks Show, CBS's Early Show and Larry King Live that Brisol and the Palin family won't let him be alone with son Tripp.

Sarah Palin's father Chuck Heath even snipped to Us Weekly: "I don't agree with what he's doing right now... I wish he'd take some of this money he's making and buy some diapers with it."

In May, he said this of Bristol on CBS: "She seems to trust me a little bit more ... Things are going pretty smooth now. So, we'll see what happens, and hopefully, you know, she holds to her word on that."

Mealtime for Tori's baby a homemade affair

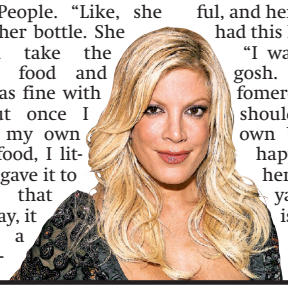
PARENTING Tori Spelling makes her own baby food, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The 90210 star — who is married to Canadian actor Dean McDermott — insists she's not a "spoilt little rich girl" who has servants and nannies to clean her house and look after her children Liam, two, and Stella, 11 months.

In a MySpace video, Tori said: "People are probably like, 'Tori Spelling doesn't do that. She probably has someone that cooks for her.' No, actually I don't. And I actually make my own baby food!"

The actress admits to feeding her son Liam jarred baby food, but decided to try homemade food with Stella.

"She's an eater," Spelling tells People. "Like, she loves her bottle. She would take the jarred food and she was fine with it. But once I made my own baby food, I literally gave it to her that first day, it was a spoonful, and her face lit up. She had this huge smile.



"I was like, 'Oh my gosh. This is an infomercial of why you should make your own baby food,' It's happening right here in my backyard and no one is here to see it."

"Who knows. I might still end up playing guitar in some bar somewhere. Or pumping gas? I honestly believe it's a miracle I still get jobs."

Chris in legal hot water again

VIOLENCE Chris Brown is facing more legal trouble — this time from a man who claims he was beaten up by the singer's bodyguard, people.com reports.

Robert Rosen is suing Brown, 20, for personal injury, alleging he was roughed up after taking a snapshot of Brown at a Los Angeles fitness club on March 13, according to the lawsuit filed in L.A. Superior Court.

Rosen claims he was chased by the bodyguard, who yelled at him after taking the picture while Brown was playing basketball, and attempted to run away, but an employee of L.A. Fitness Club allegedly "tried to block (Rosen's) exit and grabbed his clothing and body."

Rosen broke free but then fell down a flight of stairs, the lawsuit says. The bodyguard then allegedly "picked (Rosen) up by his shorts, and physically assaulted him," according to the lawsuit. Rosen adds he was "severely injured and disabled, both internally and externally," claims he was falsely imprisoned, and is seeking damages covering his medical bills and emotional distress.

Rosen, who's also suing the fitness club for negligence and other claims, argues its employees did not adequately protect him.

Brown's lawyer, Mark Geragos, says, "This is a specious and frivolous lawsuit by one of the paparazzi seeking publicity and a payday. He's done this before and lost. We will vigorously defend against this."

An L.A. Fitness Club manager had no comment. The lawsuit makes no mention of whether police were called. A Los Angeles Police Department spokesperson had no knowledge of the incident.

The Hills is, like, so lame and fake: Paris

POT CALLING THE KETTLE BLACK? Reality TV star Paris Hilton says her beau Doug Reinhardt won't be appearing on MTV's The Hills again, usmagazine.com reports.

"The show is, like, so lame and fake. He doesn't even want to be a part of it," Hilton told usmagazine.com Wednesday at the Fifi Awards in NYC.

Lauren Conrad famously dumped Reinhardt on the show. Brody Jenner later accused Reinhardt of going behind Conrad's back by pursuing Stephanie Pratt. But Hilton told Us the show portrayed Reinhardt "in a way he's not."

"They make up relationships when they're not there, and he just thinks it's lame," she said. "I've never seen the show in my life. I have no idea what it's about. But he just thought it was cheesy."

Reinhardt's reality days aren't entirely over. He will appear on the second season of Paris Hilton's My New BFF, which debuts June 2 on MTV.

Rihanna may testify at trial

BREAKING THE SILENCE Rihanna may finally speak in public about the alleged assault on her earlier this year by Chris Brown, people.com reports.

Following a hearing in Los Angeles Thursday, Rihanna's lawyer, Donald Etra, said prosecutors intend to subpoena the singer to appear at a June 22 hearing, so the court can determine if there's enough evidence to proceed with a trial.

"The DA has advised me that she will be subpoenaed (to testify)," Etra said. "She absolutely will comply." He added that Rihanna, 21, would be subject to cross-examination by Brown's lawyer, Mark Geragos.

Meanwhile, Geragos was unsuccessful Thursday in convincing a judge to grant him access to police records in effort to find out who leaked a photo of Rihanna's injuries. Asked if he's confident that he can keep Brown from serving time behind bars, Geragos replied after the hearing, "I'm not going to address any of that."

In denying Geragos' request, L.A. Superior Court Judge Patricia Schnegg said that while she agreed the leaked photo was unfortunate, she argued it had nothing to do Brown's arrest and wouldn't significantly impact his right to a fair trial.

"It matters to me not if your client is high-profile or not," the judge said. "I don't believe you're entitled (to demand access to police records)."

Brown, 20, has pleaded not guilty to allegedly beating Rihanna on Feb. 8. If convicted, he faces anywhere from probation to a maximum four years and eight months in state prison.

Experts say the case likely won't go to trial, but instead will end with a plea deal, which could happen at any time.

In a youtube.com video posted Tuesday, Brown, who's working on a new album, broke his silence and told fans "I ain't a monster" in an apparent reference to the case. His reps had no comment on the video.

Meanwhile, Rihanna was spotted last week getting cozy with Canadian hip-hop artist Aubrey "Drake" Graham, although the rapper stated they're just friends.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Crumbled Fish with Parsley and Lemon

INGREDIENTS:

2 lemons
2/3 cup (150 ml) fresh whole-wheat breadcrumbs
1/4 cup (175 ml) chopped parsley
2 garlic cloves, crushed
pepper to taste
4 chunky pieces of skinless white fish fillet, about 4 1/2 oz (130 g) each
2 tsp (10 ml) whole-grain mustard
3 Italian tomatoes, quartered
1 large zucchini, thinly sliced diagonally
1 tbsp (15 ml) extra virgin olive oil

SAFFRON MASHED POTATOES:

2 lbs (1 kg) potatoes, peeled and cut into chunks
1 tsp (5 ml) saffron threads
1/4 cup (175 ml) low-fat milk
pepper to taste

METHOD:

1. Preheat oven to 400°F (200°C). Finely grate rind and squeeze juice from 1 lemon. Mix rind with breadcrumbs, parsley and garlic, and season with pepper.
2. Place fish fillets in large, lightly oiled ovenproof dish. Spread mustard evenly over top of fish, then sprinkle over lemon juice. Arrange tomatoes and zucchini around fish. Cut remaining lemon into four wedges and put these into dish, too.
3. Spoon breadcrumb mixture over fish and press down lightly. Drizzle with olive oil. Bake fish for 25 minutes or until it flakes easily and topping is crisp.
4. Meanwhile, for saffron mashed potatoes, place potatoes in pot, cover with boiling water and add saffron. Cook potatoes for 15–20 minutes or until tender. Drain potatoes and mash with milk. Season with pepper. Serve fish with saffron mashed potatoes, tomatoes and zucchini.
